

Including 6.200 employees, the university clinic is one of the largest employers in Düsseldorf and is continuously growing. Due to its size and optimal resources, as well as a strong link between research and teaching, the university clinic offers a wide spectrum of tasks creating a multi-faceted work place. We are looking for motivated people who consider change a personal challenge.

The Institute for Medical Sociology is an epidemiological research institute embedded in the university clinic's Centre for Health and Society (CHS). The institute is dedicated to three major thematic research areas: i) innovative interventions for health promotion, including eHealth approaches, ii) social inequalities and health, and iii) (psychosocial) work strain and stress.

The Institute offers a doctoral position (Public Health) (m/w/d)

with 19.25 hours/week, remuneration according to TV-L 13, starting September 1st 2018 for three years.

Tasks:

- Conduct your own research project for your doctoral degree in the area of eHealth (Dr PH)
- Participate in the structured doctoral program of the Centre for Health and Society (CHS)
- Present your research findings at national and international scientific conferences, publish your research in peer-reviewed international journals

Requirements:

- Excellent Master's degree in health sciences, public health, social sciences, sport sciences, psychology, epidemiology (Master's level)
- Particular interest in thematic research area (i)
- Strong research orientation
- Strong quantitative skills (SPSS, STATA, R etc.), interest in mixed methods research
- Willingness to learn German

Desirable:

- First experiences in writing scientific research articles and giving presentations
- International research and/or teaching experience

What we offer:

Doctoral candidates are free to pursue their own research topics, but they are integrated in our research team facilitating intellectual exchange and scientific advice in a friendly and dynamic atmosphere. Access to existing data sets will be provided as feasible. The doctoral program of the CHS offers the opportunity to develop research and broad scientific skills. Our national and international collaboration networks can be used for academic exchange.

More information is available on our website:

<http://www.uniklinik-duesseldorf.de/en/unternehmen/institute/institute-of-medical-sociology/research/>

If you have any questions, please contact:

Miss Susanne Wrenger-Küfen via E-Mail: Susanne.Wrenger-Kuefen@uni-duesseldorf.de

The contract of employment will be with the Heinrich-Heine-University Düsseldorf.

Applications of women are requested. Women will be preferentially considered given comparable professional and personal qualifications compared to male applicants.

The Heinrich-Heine-University is an equal access and equal opportunities employer. Applicants with disabilities will be preferentially considered given comparable professional and personal qualifications.

When sending an application, the applicant agrees that the application will be the property of the university clinic Düsseldorf and will, due to costs, not be returned to the applicant.

Please apply within two weeks of the publication of this job posting via mail using the following address:

Universitätsklinikum Düsseldorf
D 01.2.1 – Kennziffer: 254E/18,
Moorenstr. 5, 40225 Düsseldorf